Also, they have been doing a lot of changes around here and your office is occupied, plus everything is "turned around". The posters you had in your office (related to Spain) have a label that "They belong to JP". I did not want them to be put in the trash (that's where they were headed) so I have Donna to store them in a closet until I try to connect with you.

Good afternoon!

Colleagues in Rome (chiefly Chiara Albanese, CCed here) will be covering the meeting of F-7 environment ministers in Bologna.

To facilitate connections during the trip and otherwise, what communications staff will be traveling with Administrator Pruitt? Can you share any logistical details for planning purposes only? Might he be doing any press during the trip?

Thanks,
Jen.

J.P., Liz, John and Amy,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about Susan Bodine, nominee for EPA enforcement chief, meeting with senators. I plan to note Sen. Duckworth's meeting with Bodine, which I'm told was yesterday, in my piece (please see below). I had a few questions for you, which are:

- Do you know of any other senators who have met with Bodine or are scheduled to meet with her? If so, who?

Any information you share with me would be for background purposes only, as in I would not attribute it to you by name.

Please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is 5 pm EST today but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

After Meeting With EPA Assistant Administrator Nominee, Duckworth Reiterates Need for Strong Environmental Protections

[WASHINGTON, DC] — U.S. Senator Tammy Duckworth (D-IL) met with Susan Bodine, the nominee to be Assistant Administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). A photo of their meeting is available here.

"I appreciated meeting with Ms. Bodine this afternoon and know that, at a time when both the President and the EPA Administrator seem intent on dismantling environmental protections, roles like the one she has been nominated for are as important as ever," said Senator Duckworth. "I will continue doing everything I can to protect our children from being poisoned by lead in their water, restore the Great Lakes, stop invasive species like Asian carp and prevent critically-important EPA Regional offices from being shuttered."

Since being sworn into the Senate, Duckworth has been a strong advocate for the preservation and expansion of commonsense initiatives to protect the environment. Duckworth recently joined a number of her colleagues in writing to President Trump to strongly encourage him not to embarrass the United States by withdrawing from the Paris Climate Agreement. Earlier this month, Duckworth penned a letter to EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt calling on him to protect agency's regional or program offices including Chicago's Region 5 office from being closed or consolidated. Duckworth also signed a bipartisan letter to Pruitt urging him to fully fund the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative in light of the Trump Administration's proposed budget cuts to the Initiative, which has been key to stopping the invasion of harmful species such as Asian carp. These fish pose a serious threat to the food supply and habitat of native fish in bodies of water throughout the Midwest, including the Great Lakes.

Duckworth has also been outspoken about the need to address failures in our public water systems and has introduced several pieces of legislation on lead in America's drinking water. Last year, Duckworth introduced two pieces of legislation to address the nationwide contaminated drinking water crisis, including the Copper and Lead Evaluation, Assessment and Reporting (CLEAR) Act of 2016 and the GET THE LEAD OUT Act. The bills would improve water testing to keep potential contaminants like lead and copper out of public water supplies and provide resources to help communities remove contaminants that may already be present.

Dear Colleagues,

I am writing to ask your help in identifying a diverse range of qualified candidates to be considered for the Administrator's appointment to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee (CASAC) and the EPA Science Advisory Board (SAB). The CASAC and the SAB are chartered federal advisory committees that provide independent, expert advice to the EPA on a range of science, engineering and economic issues.

Each year, the SAB Staff Office publishes a Federal Register Notice announcing opportunities for the public to nominate candidate experts to serve on the CASAC, the SAB, and certain SAB standing committees. On June 27, 2017, the SAB Staff Office published a Federal Register Notice requesting public nominations of candidate experts to serve on the CASAC, the Chartered SAB and the following standing SAB committees: Chemical Assessment Advisory Committee, Drinking Water Committee, Environmental Economics Advisory Committee, Environmental Engineering Committee, Environmental Processes and Effects Committee and Radiation Advisory Committee. The notice describes the functions of and expertise needed for the CASAC, the Chartered SAB and the six SAB committees.

I invite you to nominate candidates for the CASAC and the SAB, and I also encourage you to share this request with others. Nominations to the SAB or the CASAC should be made using the web nomination links at the bottom of the SAB (www.epa.gov/sab) or CASAC (www.epa.gov/casac) home pages, respectively.

Nominations are sought by July 27, 2017. Should you have questions about the nomination process or the broad charge to the CASAC or the SAB, please contact me or Thomas Carpenter (Designated Federal Officer for the SAB) at carpenter.thomas@epa.gov or Aaron Yeow (Designated Federal Officer for the CASAC) at yeow.aaron@epa.gov. Thank you in advance for your assistance in identifying a diverse set of expert candidates for the CASAC and the SAB.

JP,

I need to circle back with you on this quote from April (email below). Since then, a copy of Scott Pruitt's schedule has been released through a FOIA request. It shows a meeting between Pruitt and Dow CEO Andrew Liveris at a Houston hotel on the afternoon of March 9, less than three weeks before the administrator announced his decision to reverse EPA efforts to ban the pesticide chlorpyrifos.

When asked in April whether "Administrator Pruitt discussed the regulation of chlorpyrifos with Liveris or other Dow executives, their lawyers or their lobbyists," you replied that "We have had no meetings with Dow on this topic."

Could you now be a little more specific? If not chlorpyrifos in particular, did Pruitt and Liveris discuss the regulation of the chemical industry, including Dow pesticides and other products? If not, what did the two of them discuss?

Have there been other meetings between Pruitt and Dow executives, their lawyers or their lobbyists? If so, when?

Please provide on the record comment. AP intends to publish a story about the March meeting.

Thanks,

Michael

"We have had no meetings with Dow on this topic and we are reviewing petitions as they come in giving careful consideration to sound science and good policymaking. The Administrator is committed to listening to stakeholders affected by EPA's regulations, while also reviewing past decisions. His decision to deny a petition seeking a ban on Chlorpyrifos was lauded by experts at USDA. While we cannot prejudge any outcome of potential rule makings, we are trying to restore regulatory sanity to EPA's work."

Heads up. We have been heavily involved with this area for some time, conducting extensive outreach on preventative measures and also funding child blood lead sampling with CDC/ATSDR. We have explored the possibility of providing cooperative agreement funding to the state or city to do work. We have looked (unsuccessfully) for additional funding with regard to a HUD/City of Phila/EPA pilot project for "landscaping and covering" of residential yards near the Anzon/JTLewis site despite resistance from residents who are concerned about lead disclosure rules. Apparently, there is a cap on the funding amount allotted to the City for their Lead Hazard Abatement Program; however, HUD is looking into a community development funding mechanism they use under a different program.

The Philadelphia Health Department Laboratory is preparing to enter into a subcontract with Weston (EPA START contractor) to collect and analyze additional child blood samples. These samples are expected to be collected at community events, but we don't know of a specific timetable yet.

As you know, urban lead poses a problem beyond the situation at the location of the former Anzon facility. The scale surpasses the ability of the Removal Program to respond, at least in the traditional "dig and haul" approach. We have been trying to come up with a solution that makes sense, but are prepared to use our ERRS contractor to assist with this landscaping pilot. Although a bit frustrating this may not be all that discouraging if we can maintain HUD and City involvement. We know HUD is interested in participating and it's possible ERRS might sub work to a City lead hazard abatement contractor with landscaping expertise.

Cecil,

You're aware of the upcoming article on Lead in Philly related to the former lead smelter Anzon. The reporters doing this investigative story from the Philadelphia Daily News/Philadelphia Inquirer are Barbara Laker, Wendy Ruderman and Dylan Purnell. These three wrote the investigative series back in the fall about the pervasiveness of lead paint in Philly and its harm on children's health. See link below. As you recall, this story resulted in some elected officials calling for action.

http://www.philly.com/philly/news/Philadelphia\_ignores\_thousands\_of\_kids\_poisoned\_by\_lead\_paint.html?mobi=true

While the reporters have contacted R3 several times over the past couple of months, and we have prepared responses to them as well as Jack being approached by them at a community meeting or two and providing info,

Jack rec'd the following email below from the reporter which provides additional questions as well as a much clearer slant to the story.

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

in fact, just last night, prior to receiving Jack's email, I rec'd an email from HQ asking for the names of the reporters. To quote Nancy in her email, "folks in HQ are asking which reporters are doing this story."

They mention children playing on a hill that has high levels of Lead. (They have done their own independent sampling.) They ask, "which agency is responsible for removing the lead - DEP or EPA? "

Jack has notified ATSDR and has widely kept them informed of any questions we received.

Please let us know if you need for us to do anything at this time, other than working these questions as usual with the program and with HQ.
Thank you.

Subject: our findings

Hi Jack – Hope you're well. As you know, we're finishing up our piece and I just have a few things I wanted to pass by you.

First, is the phlebotomist testing still slated to begin in July?

Also, I wanted to let you know our findings and gauge your reaction, knowing you spend countless hours in these neighborhoods.

In the Fishtown, Kensington and Port Richmond neighborhoods, we tested soil in 114 properties. We found elevated lead (above 400 ppm) in almost three out of four properties. We've taken 282 soil samples and 39 dust wipes. In a quarter of those back yards and parks, a very high lead level was found – at least 1,000 ppm. Our highest reading was almost 10,000 ppm.

We found high samples in parks where children play, including near the pool at Cione Park, Palmer Park and a park on Emerald Street near Sergeant.

At Shissler Recreation Center, we found a negligible amount of lead before construction. After digging began right across the street, and dust and dirt was blowing into the park, the dust wipe sample was high in lead.

We also found a high level of lead – 2,904 – at the apron of the hill behind the Wawa where Anzon once stood. Children play and slide on this hill.

So first off, what is your reaction to these findings?

What's the solution?

What specifically should be done to get rid of lead in soil?

Which agency – the DEP or the EPA - is responsible to do something about this?

Why aren't developers required to test soil before digging into it, especially near playgrounds in a former industrial area?

Who should hold developers accountable?

Should some governmental agency be responsible to clean up the neighborhood or at least the parks and make them safe from lead?

Why is it ok to dig in soil directly across the street from a former contaminated site?

Is it a problem of money and/or will?

Thank you so very much for your time and patience.

I appreciate it so very much.

Best, Barbara

Dear JP,

Emma Chandra of Bloomberg TV here. One of our anchors - Alix Steel - is working on a special U.S. shale. It will focus on what's next in shale development; how deregulation of the energy industry can result in even more oil coming on line, perhaps resulting in not just energy independence but energy dominance. Alix is very keen to speak to the Administrator about how the EPA will have a hand in this. Might this be something he would be interested in?

I can set up a call with Alix should that be helpful... and she can certainly get to DC for an interview (live or on tape). Happy to discuss in more detail.

All best, Emma

The United States Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA" or "Agency") is implementing a litigation hold because of litigation with Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility ("PEER") pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA").

This litigation relates to a FOIA request for the following:

- documents that Administrator Pruitt relied upon in making statements about anthropogenic climate change during a CNBC "Squawk Box" interview on March 9, 2017; and
- documents that support the conclusion that human activity is not the largest factor driving global climate change.

The Office of General Counsel will be working with the United States Attorneys' Office and the requester to further clarify the request. However, at the current time we are interpreting the request to include any briefings, notes, presentations, or other documents concerning global warming and climate change that were created on or prior to March 9, 2017, and which Administrator Pruitt consulted in preparation of his "Squawk Box" interview.

A litigation hold means that all information related to the FOIA requests at issue, including all information related to the Agency's processing of the FOIAs, must be preserved until further notice. This hold includes any documents or materials that are potentially responsive to the requests, and any information related to the processing of the FOIA requests, including any records related to the granting or denial of fee waivers and materials related to any appeals. This litigation hold is a legal obligation that supersedes any applicable record retention schedule; you must preserve the materials covered by the litigation hold even if a record retention schedule or other policy or procedure would normally direct you to destroy them.

Please click this link Custodian Portal to view the entire litigation hold notice and questions pertaining to this matter. NOTE: You must be logged into the EPA Network to access this link.

We recognize that your time is valuable and appreciate your cooperation - the legal team is also expending considerable time and resources to support this matter and appreciates your continued support. Please note that failure to respond to the questions found at the end of the litigation hold notice will result in automatic reminders to your email account until you respond.

Subject: WSJ: Cleaning up the Superfund Mess

June 13, 2017

The Honorable John Barrasso
Chairman
Committee on Environment and Public Works
U.S. Senate
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Chairmen Barrasso:

The Wall Street Journal agrees with us. Bureaucratic inertia and political disputes over who pays for what is standing in the way of cleaning up sites that have for too long be sitting on the Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund site list.

The attached editorial lays the case out quite clear as to what Missouri Sen. Claire McCaskill's bill to transfer authority for the clean-up at the West Lake landfill from the EPA to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers – which Reps. William Lacy Clay and Ann Wagner are carrying in the House – should be allowed to die without either chamber taking action.

Scott Pruitt, the new administrator of EPA, has singled West Lake out as an example of how Superfund sites have been neglected while his agency tried to assert control over energy production and the U.S. economy. The site has his attention and he's implementing reforms to get it and sites like it cleaned-up as quickly as possible with site owners bearing most of the cost.

As recently as May of 2017 the state and federal governments have certified the West Lake site is not a health or safety threat to nearby residents.

The McCaskill bill, which is also sponsored by Sen. Roy Blunt, would leave the taxpayers on the hook for the cost of the clean-up and delay it even further. As the Journal suggests the American people have waited long enough for something to be done and should have to wait any longer. If her bill is adopted, they will.

Sincerely,

George Landrith

Cleaning Up the Superfund Mess

Obama put climate gestures above toxic waste remedies.

One cost of making climate change a religion is that more immediate environmental problems have been ignored—not least by the Environmental Protection Agency. New EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt plans to address that in an underreported effort to clean up toxic waste sites under the so-called Superfund program.

In a memo to EPA staff last month, Mr. Pruitt announced a plan to reform the Superfund program created in 1980 and to accelerate the clean-up of hazardous waste sites such as old industrial properties or landfills. The effort is long overdue. Superfund has too often become a sinecure for the bureaucracy and a cash cow for lawyers. EPA staff offices can wait years or decades to assess a Superfund site, figure out who's liable for what, consult with the community, decide on a remedy and assign the actual work.

Take the West Lake Landfill Superfund site in Bridgeton, Missouri, which was used for quarrying in the 1930s and later as a landfill. In 1973, 8,700 tons of leached barium sulfate from the Manhattan Project was dumped there, along with soil and waste. The EPA listed the 200-acre facility as a Superfund site in 1990.

Yet it took 18 years for EPA to decide how to clean up West Lake, finally settling in 2008 on a “multi-layered engineered cover and a system of new monitoring wells.” In 2009 the Obama EPA ditched that solution and re-opened the file. In 2010 an underground chemical reaction ignited a fire that is still smoldering.

Another example is the Bunker Hill Mining and Metallurgical Complex in Idaho and Washington state that polluted the air and soil with heavy metals such as lead. The EPA put Bunker Hill on its original list of 406 Superfund sites in 1983, but it too remains an open case.

Or Portland Harbor, in Oregon, which was listed in 2000. The private companies EPA found responsible spent years and tens of millions of dollars on a clean-up study that the agency eventually discarded. Obama EPA chief Gina McCarthy didn't choose a remedy for the site until this January, days before President Trump's inauguration, using information that was more than a decade old.

These are examples of the 1,336 Superfund sites on the EPA's National Priorities List. Mr. Pruitt has directed a new task force, chaired by senior adviser Albert Kelly, to review Superfund management and business practices. He has also taken power from EPA regional offices to make decisions about projects estimated to cost $50 million or more, which should speed decision-making.

The response from critics, especially from the previous Administration, is that the problem is lack of federal funding. They're upset that President Trump's budget proposes a 30% cut in Superfund for next fiscal year, $330 million less than this year.

But Superfund delays aren't the result of insufficient funds, especially since private parties now shoulder most clean-up costs, as envisaged in the original legislation. At the end of fiscal 2016 the Superfund's special accounts, which hold settlement money for specific projects, totaled $3.3 billion. EPA projects it will spend $1.3 billion of that over the next five years. That's on top of Superfund's 2018 budget request for $762 million.

In 2009 the Obama Administration pumped $600 million into the program as part of the stimulus plan. Yet the EPA's data on "construction completions,” which track Superfund sites that have finished physical construction and dealt with long-term threats, shows a downward trend even as the money flowed in. There were 18 completions in 2010, down from 20 in 2009, and 47 in 2001. In 2016 only 13 sites were completed.

The real obstacle is a combination of bureaucratic inertia and legal or political disputes over who pays what. Washington typically measures success by money spent rather than on results. Yet Superfund ought to be measured by how many sites it cleans up—until it is no longer necessary. The green lobby puts symbolic gestures against climate change above all other priorities, but if Mr. Pruitt can accelerate Superfund cleanup he’ll do far more for the environment.

Subject: EPA Administrator Pruitt's calendar

J.P., Liz, John, Amy and Lincoln,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about EPA Administrator Pruitt's calendar for February through March 2017, which I obtained under the Freedom of Information Act (please see attached). I had a few questions about this, which are:

- Administrator Pruitt has met with several industry figures – Lynn Good with Duke Energy (see page 16), Andrew Liveris with Dow Chemical (see page 16), John Watson with Chevron (see page 24), Bob Murray with Murray Energy Corp. (see page 31 and 32), and so on.
- It also appears that Administrator Pruitt didn't meet with any environmental groups during February and March 2017, according to his calendar. Has he meet with environmental group since that time period? And if so, who?

Please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is 5:30 pm EST but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

Hi JP,

Hope you are doing well! I am a reporter with the Washington Examiner and am working on a story about President Trump's commitment to the energy policy promises he made during the campaign. In a few areas we have seen the president adjust his stances in response to things he's learned on the job -- he's clearly had a change of heart on DACA, for example, he's been more hawkish against Syria and Russia than some expected him to be, etc -- but on energy policy, he has not wavered at all. Dakota Access is pumping oil now, he exited the Paris Climate Agreement, the EPA is dismantling regs and I'm sure there are more examples than those. So I am just looking into why that may be...does he have a particularly strong personal commitment to energy policy given that he encountered enviro regs as a developer, is it in part attributable to the influence EPA Administrator Pruitt has relative to other Cabinet members, is it because energy policy is so directly related to job creation, etc. I know you are very busy but any insight into what drives his commitment to energy reform would be helpful. Thank you!

Hello all,

Wanted to follow up on this inquiry for a noon deadline today.

Also, we spoke yesterday with David Schnare. He said he was briefed by representatives from the Pebble Partnership, and Schnare in turn briefed Administrator Pruitt on the Pebble project. What did Administrator Pruitt take away from Schnare's briefing?

Best,
Dylan

J.P., Liz, John and Amy,

Myself and a colleague are working on a piece about Pebble Partnership lobbying EPA to reach a legal settlement and allow the permit process for the mining project in Bristol Bay, Alaska to begin.

We will be quoting from emails and other records released to the Natural Resources Defense Council under a Freedom of Information Act request (please see attached). I have a few questions about this, which are:

- Did David Schnare bring a "specific proposal" from Pebble Partnership to Administrator Pruitt (please see page 2 of EPA 4880 000046)?
- Did EPA headquarters consult with EPA Region 10 on the settlement lifting proposed restrictions on mining in Bristol Bay?
- On May 12, EPA did reach a settlement that allows the permit process for the mining project in Bristol Bay to begin. How much influence did Pebble Partnership's lobbying of EPA influence the agency's decision?

I am working on a deadline of noon EST tomorrow. Any information you can provide would be very much appreciated.

OECA Colleagues -

I am very excited to announce that Patrick Traylor joined us today as a new Deputy Assistant Administrator for OECA. Most recently, Patrick was a partner at Hogan Lovells, a multi-national law firm headquartered in Washington, D.C. and London, where he focused on environmental law and litigation. Over the past 20 years, Patrick has built an impressive legal portfolio, assisting clients on a broad range of issues such as complex facility environmental permitting and conducting internal environmental audits. Patrick also has significant experience working across the table from EPA on enforcement matters, and he is known and respected by many OECA attorneys.

Before joining Hogan Lovells, Patrick had several key law clerk positions at: the American Chemistry Council, the U.S. Department of Justice (Environmental Enforcement Section), the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Texas (Environmental Crimes Section), and the EPA Region 6 Office of Regional Counsel.

Patrick has an undergraduate degree from Texas A&M University, a JD from the South Texas School of Law, and an LLM from George Washington University Law School.

As you can see, Patrick brings a wealth of knowledge and experience in our programs. In my conversations with Patrick, it is clear that he is excited to be on board and to get to know OECA's talented and dedicated staff. You will have a chance to meet Patrick at one of the all hands meetings scheduled for tomorrow.

Please join me in welcoming Patrick to the senior leadership team at EPA.

Larry

I am pleased to provide the draft FY 2018-2022 EPA Strategic Plan framework (Attachment 1), which outlines the goals and objectives and provides the basis for the implementation strategies that will guide the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's work over the next four years. The EPA is required to submit the draft Strategic Plan framework to the Office of Management and Budget on June 30, 2017, along with the agency's Reform Plan, Workforce Plan, and Plan for Maximizing Employee Performance.

The draft FY 2018-2022 EPA Strategic Plan framework is the starting point for two key efforts: 1) developing the EPA's full-text draft Strategic Plan, including narratives, strategic measures, and Agency Priority Goals and 2) assessing risks to achieve the strategic goals and objectives outlined in the draft framework. Attachment 2 provides guidance for these key efforts.

As a first step in developing the Strategic Plan, please review the draft program/project alignments (Attachment 3) to ensure that program/projects are assigned to the most appropriate objectives. Please provide any red flag comments to Kathy O'Brien, Director of the OCFO's Office of Planning, Analysis, and Accountability, by July 6, 2017 so that any issues can be resolved quickly and appropriate offices alerted to any changes as soon as possible.

We look forward to working with you and your staff to conduct EPA's FY 2017 risk assessments, develop our FY 2018-2022 EPA Strategic Plan, and consider risk information, along with statutory and resource issues, as we make FY 2019 planning and budget decisions. You may contact me at (202) 564-1152 or your staff may contact Kathy O'Brien at (202) 564-1167 or Malena Brookshire at (202) 564-6613 in the OCFO's Office of Planning, Analysis, and Accountability if you have questions.

LaPlace chemical plant, criticized for releasing 'likely carcinogen,' cited for 50 potential Clean Air Act violations

The Denka Performance Elastomer plant, formerly DuPont, seen here in LaPlace, La. Thursday, Dec. 22, 2016, has been tasked with reducing the emissions by 85 percent of a chemical, chloroprene, that the EPA has found to be "likely" carcinogenic.

- Advocate staff photo by MATTHEW HINTON

After sending investigators into the Denka Performance Elastomer plant for five days last year to find out why it was discharging troubling amounts of chloroprene into the air, the Environmental Protection Agency has found that the LaPlace chemical manufacturer potentially violated the Clean Air Act about 50 times, according to a report.

Chloroprene is a chemical categorized by the EPA as a "likely carcinogen."

The draft report is the result of a compliance investigation ordered by the federal agency last summer to determine whether the plant broke environmental laws. The probe continues while regulators get feedback from the company and decide whether to take action. Denka is contesting some of the findings.

According to the report, investigators found an alarming number of leaky valves, as well as inadequate oversight of large portions of the plant's complex operations.

Denka bought the plant from DuPont in late 2015. It uses chloroprene to produce neoprene, a synthetic used to make wetsuits, orthopedic braces, electric insulation and other products.

The site inspection was conducted in June 2016, six months after the EPA released its National Air Toxic Assessment, which estimates exposure for 180 air toxins nationwide. The study found that, because of the Denka plant's emissions, residents of St. John the Baptist Parish have the highest potential risk of cancer from airborne pollutants of any county in the country.

Although the plant has been producing chloroprene within permitted limits for decades — and has been cited before by the EPA during routine compliance investigations — the findings in the National Air Toxic Assessment created a new urgency to better understand the plant's operations and prompted a series of actions by the EPA and the state Department of Environmental Quality.

Initially, the agencies started working together to monitor air quality around the plant. When data started coming back showing high levels of chloroprene, the state in January entered into a consent decree with the company, in which Denka agreed to retrofit the plant and reduce emissions by 85 percent before the end of 2017.

Air monitoring in recent months has shown that the plant has subjected some residents to 88 times the concentration of chloroprene in the air that the EPA says puts people at increased risk for cancer.

Denka officials have said they believe there are errors in the report and have reserved the right to contest its findings. Ultimately, the plant could incur fines or other penalties, but only if the EPA makes a final determination that the company did indeed break the law. Such a finding could take years.

Poor monitoring

Despite progress already underway, the EPA findings have raised new concerns for scientists with the Louisiana Environmental Action Network, who have been analyzing the chloroprene-related data the agency releases.

Among the most egregious findings, according to scientist Wilma Subra, is the company's alleged failure to address multiple chemical leaks coming from faulty or compromised valves.

The report says inspectors last year observed "open-ended lines," meaning with no caps, on pipes "throughout the plant." Some of the pipes were labeled as containing toluene, another toxic chemical that can produce harmful effects in people's livers, kidneys and lungs.

Altogether, inspectors identified 31 valve leaks, according to the report. Sixteen leaks were found to be coming from uncapped lines, and inspectors noticed possible leaks from parts of the plant meant to burn off chloroprene emissions and destroy the chemical before it reaches the air.

Subra said such violations could be the source of recent spikes in chloroprene emissions, contributing to overall high average concentrations of the chemical in the parish's air.

The EPA also found potential "areas of noncompliance" with 17 other sections of federal environmental law.

In one part of the report, inspectors underscored that in recent years, about 10,000 components of the plant weren't properly monitored for leaks or other problems.

Further, the EPA found that Denka didn't properly calculate chloroprene emissions coming from the plant, in part because the company was using instruments that were unable to read the high levels.

Subra said Denka officials could technically face criminal charges if the company is found to have been negligent or to have purposely put residents "in imminent danger or death." The maximum criminal penalty, according to the EPA website, is 15 years of jail time and $500,000 in fines. Civil settlements can be much higher.

That sanction is unlikely, however, as Subra said most Clean Air Act violations are resolved after negotiations with either no significant penalty or with civil fines, usually amounting to less than $50,000.

It's unclear what sanctions, if any, will be imposed in this case. Jorge Lavastida, the plant manager, said the company is working with federal and state regulators "to resolve what we believe to be significant errors in the report."

Denka said, among other things, that inspectors failed to take into account automatic cutoff valves, meaning some uncapped pipes in fact weren't emitting high levels of chemicals.

Other open-ended lines, Lavastida said, were "exempt" from a requirement for a plug or cap because of "safety issues associated with materials that may spontaneously polymerize."

Altogether, the company objected to at least one potential citation in all 18 categories of violations outlined by the report.

Further, Jim Harris, a company spokesman, said most of the issues flagged by the EPA relate to now-outdated procedures in use before Denka bought the plant from its prior owner, DuPont.

That purchase happened in November 2015, just a month before the National Air Toxic Assessment study came out showing problems with chloroprene emissions in the parish.

Company officials further pointed to Denka's "voluntary proactive measures" to reduce emissions, including the plan to spend $17.5 million on retrofitting the plant.

EPA officials, in the meantime, said the organization's policy is not to comment on "enforcement strategy," but they praised the plant and Louisiana officials for installing new pollution controls before the on-site investigation's results came back.

History of violations

If the company is found to be in violation of the Clean Air Act, it wouldn't be the first time in the plant's history. Documents from routine investigations show that the plant's previous owner, DuPont, had been slapped with fines for failing to comply with federal laws.

According to Subra, past violations are significant, even if they occurred under prior management, because Denka retained 235 of the 240 employees when it purchased the facility from DuPont.

In 2016, records show, the EPA said DuPont "failed to design and maintain a safe facility" because of "accidental releases" of toluene. Those findings came from an inspection done in 2014. The company entered into a consent agreement and agreed to pay $37,500 in a civil penalty.

In 2006, DuPont was found to have violated the Clean Drinking Water Act.

In 1997, the EPA sought a civil penalty of $31,800 from DuPont for violating permit restrictions in producing chloroprene.

The first documented penalty incurred at the facility was in 1976, when DuPont was found to have violated the Clean Water Act and the case was referred to the U.S. Department of Justice. The company paid $15,960 in penalties.

In the past three years, 5,219 of 37,934 chemical and other facilities it regulates throughout Louisiana broke some sort of environmental protection law, according to EPA records. That comes to about one in every seven.

There also could be undetected problems. In 2011, EPA Inspector General Arthur Elkins found Louisiana was among the worst states at enforcing federal clean air, clean water and hazardous waste laws.

In a scathing report, he noted that the EPA generally delegates enforcement of federal environmental laws to state agencies but recommended that the agency either force the state to do a better job or enforce the law itself.

Among other things, Elkins cited "a culture in which the state agency is expected to protect industry."

The state contested the EPA's findings at the time, saying the state agency had been achieving its goal of inspecting all major companies at least once every two years.

History of Denka plant in LaPlace

Recently, it was discovered that the chemical plant Denka Performance Elastomer LLC was emitting high levels of chloroprene into the air, a toxic compound the Environmental Protection Agency says is likely able to cause cancer.

This timeline outlines when production started at the LaPlace plant and when scientists alerted the public about production-related dangers.

1931:

The chemical company DuPont Performance Polymers invents neoprene, a synthetic rubber that uses the chemical chloroprene to make wetsuits, orthopedic braces, electric insulation and other products.

1964:

DuPont opens a chemical plant in LaPlace.

1969:

DuPont begins producing chloroprene and neoprene at the LaPlace plant.

1976:

The EPA says DuPont violated the Clean Water Act. The case was referred to the U.S. Department of Justice, and the company paid $15,960 in penalties.

1997:

The EPA seeks a $31,800 civil penalty from DuPont for violating permits relating to the production of chloroprene.

2006:

The EPA cites DuPont for violating the Clean Drinking Water Act at its LaPlace location.

2008:

A DuPont facility in Rubbertown, an industrial area in Louisville, Kentucky, closes its doors after facing pressure from workers and environmental groups. Chloroprene production in LaPlace increases after DuPont moves its remaining operations to the St. John the Baptist Parish plant.

2010:

The EPA for the first time categorizes chloroprene as a "likely carcinogen."

2011:

EPA conducts the most recent National Air Toxic Assessment, which estimates exposure for 180 air toxins. The study finds the six census tracts with the highest estimated cancer risks nationally are all in St. John Parish due to chloroprene emissions from the DuPont plant.

2014:

DuPont becomes the largest emitter of chloroprene into the air in the United States, according to an EPA assessment used in the NATA study. Later that year, the EPA investigates DuPont for potentially violating the Clean Air Act.

November 2015:

DuPont sells the LaPlace chemical plant to a new company, Denka Performance Elastomer. Management changes hands, but Denka keeps 235 of the plant's 240 employees.

December 2015:

The EPA makes the 2011 National Air Toxic Assessment public. That same month, the EPA asks Denka for more information in an attempt to confirm emissions estimated in the study. The national regulatory agency also asks for proof that the plant is in compliance with air permits issued under the Clean Air Act.

May 2016:

The EPA visits the Denka facility to gather more information about chloroprene production at the plant and to understand what air pollution controls are in place.

Later that month, in coordination with the state Department of Environmental Quality, the agency announces an air sampling/monitoring plan for chloroprene in areas surrounding the Denka plant. It also requires the facility to start conducting its own emissions testing, and it starts working on updating the plant's chloroprene permit.

June 2016:

The EPA orders DuPont to pay $37,500 in civil fines after the 2014 Clean Air Act investigation. The agency found DuPont failed to repair leaks of toluene, another chemical produced at the plant. Investigators also visit the plant to evaluate whether it is in compliance with the Clean Air Act.

October 2016:

The investigators send a draft report to the EPA's regional office.

December 2016:

Denka says it will contest the draft report. The company also asks for numerous redactions because of "confidential business" concerns.

Later that month, DEQ Secretary Chuck Brown tells the Parish Council that some residents are "fear-mongering" about the plant's emissions.

January 2017:

DEQ signs a consent decree with Denka. In it, Denka agrees to spend $17.5 million to reduce chloroprene emissions by 85 percent by the end of 2017. The company announces a timeline for retrofitting the plant with newer technology.

April 2017:

The EPA makes public the draft report outlining more than 50 potential Clean Air Act violations at the plant.

After 18 months, hurricane vulnerability documents arrive — but they're thin

Eighteen months ago, we asked the government for documents that should have shed a lot of light on Houston's vulnerability to a massive hurricane. After finally receiving them, it turns out the documents are basically useless.

BY NEENA SATIJA JUNE 5, 2017 8 HOURS AGO

An aerial photograph of the Stolthaven Oil Tanking facility along the Houston Ship Channel on Nov. 10, 2015. Shell's Deer Park facility can be seen in the upper right. Edmund D. Fountain/ProPublica/Texas Tribune

The Texas Tribune thanks its sponsors.

Eighteen months ago, the Texas Tribune and ProPublica asked the federal government for some documents.

At the time, we were investigating what will happen the next time a massive hurricane hits Houston, and because the city is home to a massive oil refining complex, we knew a big oil spill was one likely consequence.

It's happened before: During Hurricane Katrina, rushing water caused one refinery's oil tank to rupture, sending oil into more than 1,700 homes a mile away. And the Houston area has many schools and neighborhoods that are less than a mile from large refineries and oil storage terminals.

For months, The Texas Tribune and ProPublica tried in vain to get specific information about what could happen if any of the thousands of massive oil tanks along the Houston Ship Channel sprung a leak during a hurricane; whether companies that owned the tanks were prepared; and whether nearby communities understood the risk. Our last hope, we were told, were documents called "Facility Response Plans" that big facilities must submit to the Environmental Protection Agency.

So we asked for the plans submitted by more than a dozen oil refineries and storage terminals that sit along a 50-mile waterway known as the Houston Ship Channel.

That was in January of 2016. The documents finally arrived late last month, but they shed little new light on our original questions.

Ever since the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, it's becoming increasingly difficult to get any information about the risks of an accident happening along the Houston Ship Channel. That was apparent as we fought to get these documents.

A month after our initial open records request, we got a call from EPA lawyers. They said the documents were "voluminous" and, before releasing them to us, the agency would have to consult with the Department of Homeland Security because of potential sensitive information in the plans.

That agency is basically the place where public information requests go to die.

There was a way to potentially avoid this, or at least, speed it up, the EPA said: Narrow the scope of your request. Ask only for a portion of the plan known as "vulnerability analysis."

That seemed reasonable. According to federal law, those documents "address the potential effects (i.e. to human health, property, or the environment) of an oil discharge" on nearby "water intakes, schools, residential areas, businesses," and other places. So we agreed to tweak our request.

"Thank you, we will continue to process your request," the EPA wrote in an email in February 2016.

A month later, the agency called again with more news: They were ready to provide us with one facility's vulnerability analysis, for Shell Oil's refinery in Deer Park. All the other documents would have to go through the agency where public information requests go to die.

Still, getting Shell's document was great news: The refinery is one of the largest in the country, with a crude oil capacity of 14 million gallons. Then the document arrived. It was two pages long and 13 years old — from 2003.

The main detail in those two pages: Oil that spills from the refinery could travel as much as 15 miles away in the event of a spill, depending on weather conditions and the time of day.

When we asked the company for more details, a spokesman told us they updated their Facility Response Plan in 2012. We still don't know why the EPA only produced the 2003 version.

The company also sent us some other portions of the plan — even though the EPA had insisted that any other portion could have sensitive information that could impact national security.

The additional documents noted that Shell had installed new firewalls around its tanks to protect them from damage. They added that an oil spill might affect the “heavy concentration of industrial companies” near the refinery, as well as “adjoining bayous, waterways, bays and wetlands that are environmentally sensitive areas.”

More than a year would pass before the EPA gave us any more vulnerability analyses. When they finally arrived on May 23, they were equally underwhelming.

The Stolthaven Houston Terminal stores chemicals, petroleum products and vegetable oils in 188 tanks right by the ship channel. Its analysis is one page long, and is simply a list of “features” near the terminal that might be affected by an oil spill, including “water intakes, schools, medical facilities, residential areas,” and “businesses.”

The document continues: “Identified vulnerabilities are listed in SECTION 6.” A giant black box follows, where information had been redacted.

The Texas Tribune and ProPublica called a number listed on the company’s web site as “media relations” for its U.S. branch. A reporter was connected to someone from the human resources department, and after asking for more information related to the vulnerability analysis, was told, “the answer’s probably no.”

At first glance, the documents for a transfer facility operated by Chevron looked more promising: four pages long. However, each page looked like this:

VULNERABILITY ANALYSIS (DETAILED)
Recreational Areas:
Transportation Routes (Air, Water, Land):
Utilities:
Other Applicable Areas:

This is a page from a document that Chevron submitted to the federal government. It’s supposed to detail how an oil spill at Chevron’s facility in Galena Park might impact the surrounding area. Environmental Protection Agency

A Chevron spokesman said that the company submitted a “complete” report. “The EPA may have redacted the report for security reasons, but any questions about this should be directed to the EPA,” he said.

The documents from a Petrobras Refinery in Pasadena contained a few more details, but nothing that could not have been gleaned from searching for the facility on Google Maps. It notes that two elementary schools and one high school are less than a mile from the facility, and that residential populations “begin within a quarter mile ... and continue outward.”

The document continues, “any evacuation efforts for these areas will be coordinated with the local emergency assistance agencies.” Those same words and phrases appear in many other vulnerability analyses that the EPA provided.

The EPA didn’t respond to requests for an interview, either. But officials there have made presentations about how to prepare these documents correctly, and some of the PowerPoints are online.

According to those presentations, using “generic verbiage” in these documents could be violating the law. So could leaving out the “analysis of potential effects” on schools and residential areas. Both of those issues appear in many of the documents The Texas Tribune and ProPublica received.

In short, as hurricane season begins — and nearly two years after we first started trying to truly understand the risks of what could happen in Houston — we haven’t found out much.

All we know is that, as we reported previously, thousands of cylindrical storage tanks carrying the world’s largest concentration of oil, gases and chemicals line the Houston Ship Channel. If a hurricane were to hit at the right angle, more than 25 feet of water could be sent up the channel. If even one of those tanks ruptured because of the rushing floodwaters, areas that are home to hundreds of thousands of people could be affected.

Any other details — what companies are prepared for, what the government is doing to monitor them, and specific things that residents can do to protect themselves and their property nearby — probably won’t be publicly available until it’s too late.

Read related Tribune coverage:

- Here's our full investigation into what will happen when Houston's perfect storm hits, and how little has been done to prepare.
- Several months after our investigation was published, former President Barack Obama signed a bill that may help expedite the long process of constructing a hurricane barrier on the Texas Gulf Coast.
- Dozens of Texas politicians and business leaders recently asked the federal government for $15 billion to build a hurricane protection barrier.

Attachments: Memo_FY 2018-2019 NPM Supplemental Guidance_FINAL_6-2-2017.pdf

Colleagues -

This memorandum provides supplemental guidance for developing the FY 2018-2019 National Program Manager Guidances, including updated milestones that align with issuance of the FY 2018 President's Budget on May 23.

The agency explored various options for developing this cycle of the NPM guidances in light of the transition to the new administration and the adjusted budget release date. We engaged the advice and input of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency-State NPM Guidance/National Environmental Performance Partnership System Workgroup.

Based on the workgroup's feedback, the agency will proceed with developing two-year NPM guidances for FY 2018-2019 to maintain alignment with multi-year grant work planning. We will follow a streamlined approach using a template that focuses on key programmatic activities reflected in the FY 2018 PB. The template replaces sections III.2 and IV of the Office of the Chief Financial Officer's Technical Guidance: FY 2018-2019 National Program Manager Guidance and Annual Commitment Process dated July 19, 2016 (Technical Guidance). The template and Technical Guidance can be found on EPA's NPM Guidance webpage (<https://www.epa.gov/planandbudget/national-program-manager-guidances>). In addition, we have attached updated milestones.

Thank you for your continued commitment to strengthen the EPA's collaboration internally and with our state and tribal partners. If you have any questions, please contact me or Kathy O'Brien, Director of the Office of Planning, Analysis and Accountability at (202) 564-1167, or your staff may contact Beth Burchard at (202) 564-6981.

Hello JP! How are you doing? Well, I hope! I don't think we've corresponded since you moved over from Hatch's office and I was at the WSJ.

I'm doing a piece on the following and would like a statement from EPA in response:

EPA Administrator Pruitt has repeatedly cited fracking as the reason US emissions are going down as they pull out of the Paris climate deal. Yet, Pruitt also says that pulling out of Paris is going to revive the coal industry. As you may know and many independent experts have said for years, fracking is one of the biggest causes for coal's decline.

Could you provide me a statement that reconciles what appear to be contradictory statements? Crediting fracking for emissions decline while also saying you're going to bring back the coal industry, which if you do would increase emissions.

If it's possible to get something tonight, that would be much appreciated. Thank you!

The Denka Performance Elastomer plant, formerly DuPont, seen here in LaPlace, La. Thursday, Dec. 22, 2016, has been tasked with reducing the emissions by 85 percent of a chemical, chloroprene, that the EPA has found to be "likely" carcinogenic.

The Fifth Ward Elementary School seen here in Reserve, La. Thursday, Dec. 22, 2016, borders land of the Denka Performance Elastomer that has been tasked with reducing the emissions by 85 percent of a chemical, chloroprene, that the EPA has found to be "likely" carcinogenic.

History of Denka plant in LaPlace

Recently, it was discovered that the chemical plant Denka Performance Elastomer LLC was emitting high levels of chloroprene into the air, a toxic compound the Environmental Protection Agency says is likely able to cause cancer.

This timeline outlines when production started at the LaPlace plant and when scientists alerted the public about production-related dangers.

1931:

The chemical company DuPont Performance Polymers invents neoprene, a synthetic rubber that uses the chemical chloroprene to make wetsuits, orthopedic braces, electric insulation and other products.

1964:

DuPont opens a chemical plant in LaPlace.

1969:

DuPont begins producing chloroprene and neoprene at the LaPlace plant.

1976:

The EPA says DuPont violated the Clean Water Act. The case was referred to the U.S. Department of Justice, and the company paid $15,960 in penalties.

1997:

The EPA seeks a $31,800 civil penalty from DuPont for violating permits relating to the production of chloroprene.

2006:

The EPA cites DuPont for violating the Clean Drinking Water Act at its LaPlace location.

2008:

A DuPont facility in Rubbertown, an industrial area in Louisville, Kentucky, closes its doors after facing pressure from workers and environmental groups. Chloroprene production in LaPlace increases after DuPont moves its remaining operations to the St. John the Baptist Parish plant.

2010:

The EPA for the first time categorizes chloroprene as a "likely carcinogen."

2011:

EPA conducts the most recent National Air Toxic Assessment, which estimates exposure for 180 air toxins. The study finds the six census tracts with the highest estimated cancer risks nationally are all in St. John Parish due to chloroprene emissions from the DuPont plant.

2014:

DuPont becomes the largest emitter of chloroprene into the air in the United States, according to an EPA assessment used in the NATA study. Later that year, the EPA investigates DuPont for potentially violating the Clean Air Act.

November 2015:

DuPont sells the LaPlace chemical plant to a new company, Denka Performance Elastomer. Management changes hands, but Denka keeps 235 of the plant's 240 employees.

December 2015:

The EPA makes the 2011 National Air Toxic Assessment public. That same month, the EPA asks Denka for more information in an attempt to confirm emissions estimated in the study. The national regulatory agency also asks for proof that the plant is in compliance with air permits issued under the Clean Air Act.

May 2016:

The EPA visits the Denka facility to gather more information about chloroprene production at the plant and to understand what air pollution controls are in place.

Later that month, in coordination with the state Department of Environmental Quality, the agency announces an air sampling/monitoring plan for chloroprene in areas surrounding the Denka plant. It also requires the facility to start conducting its own emissions testing, and it starts working on updating the plant's chloroprene permit.

June 2016:

The EPA orders DuPont to pay $37,500 in civil fines after the 2014 Clean Air Act investigation. The agency found DuPont failed to repair leaks of toluene, another chemical produced at the plant. Investigators also visit the plant to evaluate whether it is in compliance with the Clean Air Act.

October 2016:

The investigators send a draft report to the EPA's regional office.

December 2016:

Denka says it will contest the draft report. The company also asks for numerous redactions because of "confidential business" concerns.

Later that month, DEQ Secretary Chuck Brown tells the Parish Council that some residents are “fear-mongering” about the plant’s emissions.

January 2017:

DEQ signs a consent decree with Denka. In it, Denka agrees to spend $17.5 million to reduce chloroprene emissions by 85 percent by the end of 2017. The company announces a timeline for retrofitting the plant with newer technology.

April 2017:

The EPA makes public the draft report outlining more than 50 potential Clean Air Act violations at the plant.

Hi JP,

I sent my query to Lincoln because he also worked with Administrator Pruitt in Oklahoma. I am forwarding my questions to you as well, in case he hasn't seen my email, to give the EPA a chance to respond.

Best regards,

Hi Lincoln,

I hope you are doing well. I wanted to touch base to check something out with you regarding Administrator Pruitt's use of e-mail addresses during his time as Attorney General of Oklahoma.

I am aware that Administrator Pruitt disclosed the use of two e-mail addresses during his time as Attorney General – his personal address (me.com) and his official address – scott.pruitt@oag.ok.gov). The group CMD brought to my attention another email address – esp@oag.ok.gov – that came up numerous times in the latest batch of emails they received from their public records' request.

I wanted to confirm if this was in fact his e-mail address. I also wanted to ask whether he used that address for specific communications and why he did not disclose this e-mail address when asked about it in his confirmation hearing and in a written response to a QFR?

Thanks in advance for your help.

Best regards,
Valerie

JP, do you have any insight on when we might see the proposed RVOs? I know OIRA meetings wrapped up on Friday, setting the stage for a possible release this week (and I don't mind admitting that I'm terrified they'll come when I'm in jury duty on Thursday).

On background or otherwise, can you give us any indication whether we should expect any action/commentary on two related issues: the reid vapor pressure waiver sought for E15 and the point of obligation change sought by Valero and other companies (which was proposed to be denied by EPA last year)? I'm of course happy to talk by phone.

We have a strong record of covering this issue, including the RVOs themselves (and the ongoing litigation over EPA's waiver authority).

If you are releasing any details to outlets early, I hope you'll keep Bloomberg (me and colleagues Mario Parker and Ari Natter) in mind.

Hi J.P. and Liz,

I'm writing for tomorrow about your rulemaking to rescind the Clean Power Plan. I'm told that it will focus on the legal argument that EPA did not have authority to regulate outside the fenceline. I'm also told that it will count the Social Cost of Carbon benefits to the U.S., rather than the world. And that it will count the costs of implementing energy efficiency programs but not necessarily the monetary benefits down the line.

I'm told the rulemaking is brief, about 20 pages, and the regulatory impact analysis is about 100 pages.

I wanted to give you a heads up and see if anyone could confirm or let me know if this sounds wrong.

I understand if you can't comment, but please let me know if you get this message. I've been emailing press@epa.gov and getting no response. It would be helpful to know if I'm emailing the right folks so that I can keep you in the loop.

Don - thank you again for taking the time to sit down with me, Matt, and Michele Jones from the National Insulation Association the other day. We truly appreciated your time and insight and look forward to working with you and your team to further the Administration's agenda. Per our conversation, we wanted to send over a draft "skeleton" op-ed that the Administrator could write in relation to the impact that mechanical or thermal insulation could have on our economy, jobs, and energy savings. Please let us know if you have questions or need further information for this issue.

Michele Jones will also be following up with you on some of the other action items we discussed as well. Thanks again for your time! - Steve

@FCBorg

Investing in American-made products that promote American jobs has never been more important. We need to empower businesses that manufacture products here in the USA in order to bolster our economy and provide jobs for our hardworking citizens. Right now, there is an industry that manufactures 99% of its materials in the United States: the mechanical insulation industry.

Mechanical insulation is the unsung hero of the commercial and industrial construction industries. It saves money by lessening energy losses, providing personnel protection, protecting and lengthening equipment life, and providing an attractive return on investment.

The National Insulation Association estimates that implementing a comprehensive mechanical insulation maintenance and upgrade program to comply with current ASHRAE and Energy Code requirements in the commercial and industrial markets would lead to $4.8 billion in annual energy savings and reduce 43 million metric tons of carbon emissions. This will allow businesses to save energy without implementing onerous regulations that would increase costs and limit business growth. This type of program would also generate 89,000 additional jobs—both for insulation contractors and related sectors in parallel industries. Between 90%–95% of contractors represent small businesses, and supporting small business must be a top priority in rebuilding our economy.

Perhaps the best thing about increasing the use of mechanical insulation is that it is an existing and proven technology, with all the necessary established infrastructure ready to support its growth. Mechanical insulation installation and maintenance programs can put tens of thousands of people to work immediately, while also contributing to the competitiveness and growth of U.S. manufacturing. This will reduce our country's dependence on foreign energy sources while simultaneously increasing the profitability of private and public businesses and facilities.

There are few industries whose materials are made almost exclusively in the United States. If we invest in the mechanical insulation industry, we are supporting American-made products and jobs here first, prioritizing our commitment to the creation of good-paying jobs for American citizens.

It is high time we focused on opportunities that will help American workers. Industries that reside and manufacture their products here in the United States deserve our support. Employers in the energy-efficiency field expect the highest growth rate over any other energy sector—we need to support opportunities to save money and energy without implementing harsh rules that will harm business growth. Within the energy-efficiency sector, 363,000 jobs are in the sub category of advanced building materials and insulation. These anticipated jobs add to the insulation industry's economic contributions, which accounted for nearly 400,000 jobs in the United States, and more than $20 billion in payrolls in 2016.

Mechanical insulation is a proven, easily accessible technology that will support the growth of multiple industries, save billions of dollars, and create tens of thousands of jobs. Supporting the increased use of this common sense and practical technology has the potential to dramatically expand job opportunities and help rebuild a robust economy.

Dear J.P.,

We were sorry the event at Hoover's Washington, DC office didn't work out, but we wanted to extend an invitation to join us for an off-the-record, closed-door briefing with Hoover Institution fellows in Palo Alto. Our offices are forty-five minutes from your Region 9 Headquarters in San Francisco if you are able to add a stop to a future California visit.

We are inviting Administrator Pruitt to join the Hoover Institution's Leadership Forum, which is designed to facilitate meaningful discussions between leaders and Hoover scholars on various policy areas. Hoover's distinguished fellows range from former Secretary of State George Shultz, to former United States Court of Appeals Judge for the Tenth Circuit Michael McConnell, to former White House CEA Chair Ed Lazear. The program provides a collaborative space for Hoover scholars and policy leaders to examine the current public policy landscape and determine effective methods of policy implementation. Past program participants have included OMB Director Mulvaney, Senator Ben Sasse, Senator Tom Cotton, Senator Rob Portman, and Governor Scott Walker.

We customize the program for each leader's specific interests and availability. Forums typically run ninety minutes; we look forward to discussing issues important to the EPA including environmental policy and the constitutional and economic impacts of regulatory reform. Our goal is to make the time valuable and meaningful for everyone.

I hope you will consider joining us and look forward to hearing from you.

Best,
Maria

Don't doubt that Scott Pruitt will finally address Superfund sites the EPA has ignored

Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt takes questions at the White House on June 2. (Jonathan Ernst/Reuters)

While it's refreshing to see attention given to Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt's announcement that he is going to refocus his agency's attention on core mission tasks such as the cleanup of Superfund sites, the "doubting Thomas" aspects of the June 19 front-page article "Waiting for a cleanup to come" were quite discouraging.

Under Democrats and Republicans, the EPA neglected its responsibilities while trying to expand its regulatory authority over the U.S. economy in ways Congress never intended. Mr. Pruitt's reining in those impulses is a good thing. Even better, he's taking the initiative to have sites sitting on the Superfund list for several decades, such as the West Lake Landfill in Bridgeton, Mo., cleaned up at the site owner's cost, rather than U.S. taxpayers'.

Missouri and the federal government certified time and again that the site poses no immediate health hazard to nearby residents. The actions taken by government thus far have impeded its remediation. The citizens of Bridgeton have waited long enough. Mr. Pruitt has promised to act and is entitled to the benefit of the doubt that he will act.

J.P., Liz, John, Amy and Lincoln,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about EPA Administrator Pruitt's calendar for February through March 2017, which I obtained under the Freedom of Information Act (please see attached). I had a few questions about this, which are:

- Administrator Pruitt has met with several industry figures – Lynn Good with Duke Energy (see page 16), Andrew Liveris with Dow Chemical (see page 16), John Watson with Chevron (see page 24), Bob Murray with Murray Energy Corp. (see page 31 and 32), and so on.
- It also appears that Administrator Pruitt didn't meet with any environmental groups during February and March 2017, according to his calendar. Has he meet with environmental group since that time period? And if so, who?

Please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is 5:30 pm EST but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

J.P., Liz, John, Amy and Lincoln,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about Richard Yamada joining EPA as deputy assistant administrator in the agency's Office of Research and Development, citing Richard's LinkedIn profile (<https://www.linkedin.com/in/richard-yamada-8945522/>).

I don't need a comment from you but I wanted to give you a heads up about the piece. That said, if you do have some thoughts to share, I would be happy to add them to the piece.

If you do wish to comment, please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is 4 pm EST today but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

Dear J.P.,

I am a producer with FRONTLINE, the flagship public affairs series on PBS.

I am reaching out to discuss the prospect of interviewing Scott Pruitt for an hour-long program we are producing that will take a balanced look at the effort to unwind Obama-era energy and environmental policies; the program will also seek to explain why the Environmental Protection Agency had become the subject of criticism through-out the country.

We are seeking to put the debate about environmental regulations into a larger economic and political context for our viewers. We will do so by including a wide range of perspectives on the real-world cost of environmental regulations and their impact on industry. The documentary will air in October/November.

The purpose of this program is to create something comprehensive and informative. As you may know, Frontline is respected for its depth, fairness, and commitment to nuanced story-telling. We think it is vital that our viewers hear from Mr. Pruitt. He can help our viewers understand why, as he puts it, "people look at the EPA the way they look at the IRS." This documentary will trace the recent history of grievances with the EPA including Mr. Pruitt's efforts as Oklahoma AG to argue for the rule of law against EPA regulations fourteen times. We would also like to interview Mr. Pruitt about his goals in his new role as EPA Administrator, particularly his efforts to roll back Obama-era policies to get the EPA "back to basics."

We are planning to spend some time filming in Washington DC, and we would also like to spend time in Oklahoma and elsewhere in the heartland where one can clearly see the transformative economic impact of the energy industry. I've heard from friends and colleagues in Oklahoma City that the city has blossomed as a result of the shale revolution - a revolution that is, without a doubt, one of the most important economic developments in this country's recent history.

If possible, we would like to arrange an on-camera interview with Mr. Pruitt. We are also interested in following him on any upcoming media events on his Back to Basics tour. We can discuss that further, but our primary objective is to sit down with Mr. Pruitt to understand his views on federalism as they relate to environmental regulation and how he plans to balance economic expansion with environmental concerns.

If it would be helpful, my colleagues and I would be happy to meet with you in person to discuss this request. I'm available any time by phone to address any questions or concerns. My cell is

J.P., Liz, John, Amy and Lincoln,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about EPA ending fitness subsidies for employees as well as closing fitness centers used by employees. I have obtained an email giving official notice to EPA employee union leaders about this change (please see below). I had a few questions about this, which are:

-- Why is EPA ending fitness subsidies for employees as well as closing fitness centers used by employees?

-- EPA Administrator Pruitt discussed agency employees using taxpayer funds to buy gym memberships in this Fox and Friends interview on April 13 (<http://video.foxnews.com/v/5397108116001/?#sp=show-clips>). Did that incident have anything to do with EPA decision's to end fitness subsidies as well as close fitness centers?

-- It is my understanding that EPA has a fitness center in headquarters as well as in each of its regional offices. What will happen to these 11 fitness centers once EPA stops funding them?

Please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is noon EST today but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

J.P., Liz, John and Amy,

Myself and a colleague are working on a piece about Pebble Partnership lobbying EPA to reach a legal settlement and allow the permit process for the mining project in Bristol Bay, Alaska to begin.

We will be quoting from emails and other records released to the Natural Resources Defense Council under a Freedom of Information Act request (please see attached). I have a few questions about this, which are:

- Did David Schnare bring a “specific proposal” from Pebble Partnership to Administrator Pruitt (please see page 2 of EPA 4880 000046)?
- Did EPA headquarters consult with EPA Region 10 on the settlement lifting proposed restrictions on mining in Bristol Bay?
- On May 12, EPA did reach a settlement that allows the permit process for the mining project in Bristol Bay to begin. How much influence did Pebble Partnership’s lobbying of EPA influence the agency’s decision?

I am working on a deadline of noon EST tomorrow. Any information you can provide would be very much appreciated.

Thanks.

Peter:

My calendar for next week is relatively open, although with the new Administrator coming in, and a heavy briefing schedule for him in the wings, it could get messy rather quickly. Late afternoon is often the best time (after 5). Let me know what day you want and I'll hold that time.

I am aware of the problem in general but do not have specifics. Can you bring with you a timeline of events and a status on the legal actions? The preemptive strike by the last administration was indeed unprecedented and I don't want to see it become a precedent, particularly because it is a violation of Pebble's due process rights.

In any case, I need to get this set up for the Administrator, which means I need the full background and a specific proposal on what we can and should do. Without meaning to be flip, that's your homework assignment.

Best,

David Schnare

David,

Thanks for chatting with me briefly. I'm the Senior Vice President for Corporate Affairs for the Pebble Partnership. As you may know, Pebble is trying to develop a world-class copper mine in southwestern Alaska. We have yet to submit the first of the permit applications necessary to move ahead with the mine -- the permit application under section 404 of the Clean Water Act.

EPA, through Region 10, has moved to block our efforts to develop the mine by putting forward a preemptive veto of the mine -- before we submit our permit application -- under Clean Water Act section 404(c). This action is unprecedented and fundamentally unfair. There is no environmental harm that comes from allowing us to submit our permit application, because the Corps of Engineers (which reviews these permit applications) may say no, and even if the Corps says yes, the Agency retains the ability to veto the permit. We are only looking for the same due process that 60,000 other permit applicants get each year.

There is a significantly long history of this matter (including our ongoing litigation against the Agency), and I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss it with you and seek your guidance and assistance on our efforts to work through these issues with the Agency.

Do you have time for me to meet with you in the near future?

Sincerely,

Peter Robertson

Pruitt said he would look into this.

Can you help us with any info you have on what exactly he'll do?

On this email is Todd, our investigative guy. Any info you have can go to him...

Thanks if you can help, hope you're good.

On behalf of Bloomberg Government, I'm writing to invite Dr. Fine to speak at an artificial intelligence webinar we are hosting on June 28:

Bloomberg Government Analyst Cameron Leuthy is going to give an overview of how federal agencies are integrating AI technologies, and we're hoping you can then join him for a conversation on your experiences working to integrate AI and other innovative technologies as part of your efforts to modernize the Department's IT architecture and combat cyber threats. The webinar will then conclude with a presentation by Bill Eggers from Deloitte's Center for Government Insights, sharing the results of recent research they've done on AI's impact on government.

Ideally we'd prefer to have you join Cameron in our office—1101 K St NW in DC—to record the webinar, but we can also do it virtually if it won't work for you to be there in person. The webinar will run from 2-3 pm on June 28.

Please let me know if you have any questions, and we hope it will work for you to join us.

J.P.,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about changes in EPA's public affairs office. Liz Bowman is now EPA's acting associate administrator for public affairs, according to an internal email sent today by Ryan Jackson that I obtained (please see below). In addition, that means that you, J.P., are no longer EPA's associate administrator for public affairs and I understand that you have been reassigned to work elsewhere in the agency. I have a few questions about this, which are:

- Why were you reassigned to work elsewhere in EPA?
- Where was you reassigned in EPA and what is your new title?

Please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is 4 pm EST today but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

Dear Colleagues,

Last weekend marked the 120th day since Administrator Pruitt's swearing-in as the 14th EPA Administrator. I appreciate the welcome from so many of you as the Administrator had the opportunity to visit each of the program offices during his first two weeks here. Thank you for your continued welcome as the Administrator has brought additional faces into the agency.

I believe it is important to provide you with a listing and the responsibilities of the new team that has joined EPA to fill positions in the Office of the Administrator and program offices. Some additional staff, including Assistant Administrator and Regional Administrator appointees, will join as we move forward. There likely will be a few changes in responsibilities, but I wanted to provide you with a description of the new staff we have been privileged to welcome to EPA.

As always, thank you for your work, and I continue to look forward to our future work together at the EPA.

Hi,

I'm the Washington Correspondent for The Lancet. I'm working on a story about some of the Trump Administration's recent appointments to top health and science positions, remaining vacancies, and the status of science advisory committees.

I understand that last month, Administrator Pruitt decided to dismiss half of the 18 members of EPA's Board of Scientific Counselors, after some members reported that EPA officials told them they would continue for a second term, which they said is the usual practice.

I'd appreciate a comment on why these members were dismissed.

Also, are similar changes expected for the committees within the Scientific Advisory Board? There have been news reports explaining that the administrator would like improve industry representation on these committees. Is that accurate? And if so which industries?

My story is due on Friday, 5 pm. I would appreciate it if you could please get back to me as soon as possible.

And if you're curious, links to some of my recent Lancet stories are available here.

Thanks very much for your help. And could you please let me know you received this?

Thanks,

J.P., Liz, John, Amy, Lincoln and Jahan,

Hi, it's Kevin Bogardus with E&E News.

I'm working on a piece about the EPA buyout process. EPA unions have been given official notice about the upcoming round of buyouts. Further, EPA plans to make the maximum number of offers under this buyout round to be 1,228 employees and employees who take a buyout offer must leave by Sept. 2, 2017, according to an internal email I have obtained (please see below). In addition, EPA has proposed a draft memorandum of understanding for the buyout process (please see attached).

I don't have any questions for you but I wanted to give you a heads up about the piece. That said, if you do want to share any thoughts, I would be happy to add them to the piece.

If you do wish to comment, please get back to me as soon as possible. My deadline is 4 pm EST today but the sooner you get back to me, the more it helps my reporting. Thank you for your help.

From: Coomber, Robert
Sent: Tuesday, June 20, 2017 12:38 PM
Subject: Official Notice: VERA/VSIP

Good Afternoon:

We have called all of you individually regarding the upcoming VERA/VSIP offering. Any VERA/VSIP offering is still subject to OPM and OMB approval. However, in the meantime, we are seeking to work together to reach an agreement over procedures that we will utilize for this next round – should it be approved. The maximum number of offers under this VERA/VSIP will be 1228 employees, agency-wide. As of now, the last effective date for employee separations is September 2, 2017, so any applications would have to be in before that date.

With this email, we are providing official notice of the next round of VERA/VSIP offerings, and we are attaching a proposed MOU detailing procedures for the parties to follow. This MOU is extremely similar to MOUs signed between the agency and most of the unions in 2014 and 2015. This MOU incorporated suggestions made by Union representatives during negotiations over the VERA/VSIP offerings in 2014 and 2015. Also attached as a courtesy please find the mass mailer that will go out to employees this afternoon. Regarding retirement training, the Shared Service Centers have told us the following:

Starting next week each SSC will provide webinars twice on each Tuesday and Thursday until the window ends on July 26th. Times will vary to cover time zones across serviced organizations. We may provide additional sessions for customers by request if needed. There is also a 508 compliant version of the presentation that is going on the Agency VERA/VSIP intranet site that employees can access on their own as needed.

Some of you mentioned that you would provide the agency with draft MOUs based on our past MOUs. We are happy to look at your drafts, but we ask you to keep in mind that most of the negotiable aspects of VERA/VSIP need to be consistent across the agency. Please get us any feedback you have as soon as possible. We hope to have the agreements signed by Friday, June 30, 2017. If you have any questions, please let me know as soon as possible, as we are looking to move forward quickly to provide this opportunity to employees.

Thank you for your efforts.

Subject: Agency's Workforce Shaping through Voluntary Early Retirement and Separation Incentive Payment Authorities (VERA/VSIP)

SUBJECT: Agency's Workforce Shaping through Voluntary Early Retirement and Separation Incentive Payment Authorities (VERA/VSIP)

FROM: Mike Flynn

Acting Deputy Administrator

TO: All EPA Employees

Dear Colleagues,

In my April 17, 2017 memo to EPA senior management, I announced that we were beginning steps to initiate an early out/buyout program with a goal to complete the program by the end of September 2017. I wanted to give you an update on the current status and upcoming steps on the program.

Voluntary Early Retirement Authority (VERA) and Voluntary Separation Incentive Payment Authority (VSIP), often referred to as early outs and buy outs, can help us realign our workforce to meet changing mission requirements and move toward new models of work. The authority encourages voluntary separations and helps the Agency complete workforce restructuring with minimal disruption to the workforce.

Current Status

The Agency has begun a workforce reshaping effort in which headquarters and regional offices are reviewing their current organizations and analyzing where they can achieve efficiencies. As a result of these analyses, the Agency is planning to use VERA/VSIP where it makes sense and where it is aligned with these efficiencies. We will be working with the Agency's labor unions as we go through the VERA/VSIP process.

Headquarters and regional offices currently are working on VERA/VSIP business cases for their respective organizations. Our Office of Human Resources staff will review and consolidate these business cases into one agency-wide business case which will be submitted to the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for approval.

In developing our VERA/VSIP business case, we are considering multiple factors including increasing supervisor to staff ratio; consolidating support functions; restructuring or reducing highly graded supervisory and non-supervisory positions; focusing on core business functions, programmatic and STEM priorities, and consolidating and streamlining programs and functions. Details on the selection criteria for employees in the pool are still being worked out.

Next Steps

We plan to submit our agency-wide VERA/VSIP business case to OPM/OMB for approval later in June, and will work closely with OPM/OMB to help expedite the review process. We will provide you information on what positions will be included in the VERA/VSIP program as soon as possible, likely sometime in July. We expect a limited number of employees will be offered VERA/VSIP, and those who accept a VERA/VSIP offer must leave the Agency by early September 2017.

Please look for additional VERA/VSIP information from your organization's senior leadership soon. In the interim, I have provided you with some helpful links below.

Many thanks for your continued commitment to EPA's mission and public service. I am very proud to work alongside you.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING
Between the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the [Union(s)]

This Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) is entered into by the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and [Union(s)] for the purpose of facilitating the EPA's Voluntary Separation Incentive Payments ("VSIPs" or "buy-out") and Voluntary Early Retirement Authority ("VERA" or "early-out") offerings.

TERMS OF UNDERSTANDING

1. This MOU applies to all [Union(s)] bargaining unit members.
2. The parties understand that the procedures set forth in this memorandum apply if and when the Agency receives approval from OPM and OMB of Agency requests for VERA/VSIP offerings. The parties further understand that any information provided to employees prior to any such approval is subject to change.
3. In order to facilitate the opportunity for long-term planning, the Agency, to the extent feasible, will endeavor to provide employees with information regarding potential positions that may be included in a VERA/VSIP offering, prior to final approval of OPM/OMB approval.
4. After OPM/OMB approval and prior to the beginning of the application period, each geographical location and/or organizational unit (as appropriate) that is conducting a VERA/VSIP offering will notify all [Union(s)] employees via email or in writing, about which job series and positions are eligible for the VERA/VSIP offering. The notice will include the number of VERA/VSIP offers available for each eligible job series and position and any other factors impacting eligibility. Such notice will also include the dates of the application period, projected date that applicants will be informed they have been selected for a VERA/VSIP offer, deadline for employees to withdraw their application, and the final date of separation for employees accepting a VERA/VSIP offer.
5. The Parties agree that the application period for the VERA/VSIP offering will generally be no less than thirty (30) calendar days from the final date of separation, unless the Agency determines that the thirty (30) calendar day application period is not feasible. The application deadline will generally be at least fourteen (14) days prior to the final date of separation. If the timeframes in this section are not feasible, the parties will work together to implement an abbreviated application period.

6. Applicants are authorized to use government equipment to prepare and submit applications for the VERA/VSIP offering. Subject to the Agency's operational needs, the Agency will authorize a reasonable amount of duty time for employees to review the VERA/VSIP application and corresponding materials.
7. Applications will be accepted via the electronic application system only. Employees will generally receive an electronic notice of receipt within an hour of submitting their application. If upon review an application is found to be incomplete, the applicant will be contacted via either email or telephone if additional information is needed. To the extent feasible, applicants may receive consideration even if their application is incomplete.
8. The parties agree that employees accepting the VERA/VSIP offering must separate from the Agency no later than the final date of separation for the given VERA/VSIP offering as designated by the Agency. The parties also agree that, in accordance with 5 CFR § 576.103, 5 CFR § 842.213, and any other applicable law or regulation, employees on military duty who would otherwise be eligible for a VERA/VSIP offer will have 30 days following their return to the Agency to either accept or reject an offer.
9. The parties agree that employees may withdraw their application or separation paperwork at least one day before the final date of separation or before they actually separate, whichever comes first, by written notification to their servicing Shared Services Center.
10. At the Agency's exclusive discretion and option, the Agency will consider seeking authorization for additional VERA/VSIP offers if there are more eligible applicants, who have submitted their applications by the application deadline, than there are available offers under the relevant grade, occupational series, geographic location, etc. authorization (the offering is oversubscribed).
11. The parties agree that if there are more eligible applicants than available VERA/VSIP offers under the relevant OPM authorization (the offering is oversubscribed), offers shall be granted first to the most senior employee, as determined by the Service Computation Date (SCD) – Leave, who has submitted his or her application by the application deadline. If two or more eligible applicants submit their application by the application deadline and have the same SCD – Leave, the offer shall be granted to the most senior employee, as determined by the Entry on Duty (EOD) date – Total EPA years of service. If two or more eligible applicants submit their application by the application deadline and have the same SCD – Leave and EOD date – Total EPA years of service, the offer shall be granted to the employee who submitted his or her application first.

12. Applicants will be notified of their selection or non-selection for a VERA/VSIP offer on a continuing basis. Applicants receiving an offer will receive a notice that includes the amount of his or her incentive. Eligible applicants who do not receive an offer because there are more eligible applicants than available VERA/VSIP offers under the relevant OPM authorization (the offering is oversubscribed) will be given the option of being placed on a waitlist. Employees on the waitlist will be notified if and when a VERA/VSIP offer (under their applicable authorization) becomes available on a continuing basis, consistent with Section 9 of this agreement.
13. Employees applying for the VERA/VSIP may request information about their retirement and benefits, including whether or not they will be receiving the $25,000 incentive pay, a lesser incentive pay or no incentive pay. The Agency will provide a timely response to such requests and provide this information to employees to permit them time for the employee to withdraw their application for the VERA/VSIP. Individual retirement counseling and information will be made available to employees, both at Headquarters and in applicable regions, during the application period.
14. Eligibility, selection, and non-selection determinations for the VERA/VSIP offering will be made without discrimination in regard to political affiliation, Union activity, race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, marital status, age, or non-disqualifying handicapping conditions.
15. The parties agree that this MOU covers all procedures and therefore satisfies all Agency bargaining obligations relating to EPA VERA/VSIP offerings conducted from [(insert date agreement is signed) to – appx. October 31, 2017 – TBD once we hear back from OPM]. By signing this MOU, neither party surrenders any statutory rights.
16. Any reorganization, space move, or other change that may result from a VERA/VSIP offering are considered independent subjects of bargaining, pursuant to applicable midterm bargain procedures and any bargaining requirements associated with these changes will be governed by applicable agreements between the parties, law, rule and regulation.

17. This MOU will become effective upon Agency Head review or on the thirty-first (31st) calendar day after execution, whichever comes first.
18. In signing this MOU, the Agency and Unions agree that they have full authority to execute the agreement, including on behalf of all [Union] locals. This MOU is subject to Agency Head review, which the Agency will make every attempt to expedite.
19. In the event that any provision (section, paragraph, sentence, etc.) of this MOU is held invalid or found to conflict with competent jurisdiction or found to conflict with regulation, rule, or statute by a third party, the remaining provisions of this MOU shall remain in full force and effect. The Parties shall promptly meet and attempt to reach agreement on any provision found invalid.

Could you please confirm this e-mail came from Bob Kavlock (see below)? Also, the implication of this email appears to mean that the EPA's ORD office won't receive advice from the BOSC for probably about one year, as the committee is re-vetted and put together. But the EPA is going through major changes, including potentially significant cuts to its ORD office. How will the agency make effective decisions on what to cut and on its path, given its soon to be lacking advisors that help offer feedback on those fronts? Is the agency concerned? Is there an alternative plan?

Subject: Update on VERA/VSIP Opportunities

Dear Colleagues,

On June 1, 2017, I announced that the agency had begun a workforce reshaping effort in which headquarters and regional offices were reviewing their current organizations and analyzing where they can achieve efficiencies. On June 16, 2017, the agency submitted its draft request to the Office of Personnel Management and the Office of Management and Budget to use VERA (also known as early-out) and VSIP (also known as buy-out) where it makes sense and where it is aligned with these efficiencies.

Our agency-wide business case for VERA/VISIP reflects multiple factors, including increasing the staff to supervisor ratio; consolidating and streamlining functions; restructuring or reducing highly graded supervisory and non-supervisory positions; and focusing on core business functions, programmatic and STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics) priorities.

We expect to hear from OPM and OMB on our request by late June. In the interim, agency management will share with employees information on the grades, occupational series, and geographic locations within their organization that are included in the VERA and VSIP request. We expect a limited number of employees will be offered VERA/VSIP, and those who accept a VERA/VSIP offer must leave the agency by early September. The decision to take advantage of a VERA or VSIP is entirely voluntary.

Throughout this process, we will be working with our union partners. We will provide more details as they become available. Thank you again for your support as we work through this together.

Acting Deputy Administrator

Hi folks:

The email appended below was forwarded to us this morning. If you dispute its authenticity, please let me know. Otherwise, I just wanted to see about getting a list of the subcommittee meetings that have now been canceled. (I don't see them on the BOSC's website.) Also, how many members whose terms expire in August will not be renewed and do these include members of both the BOSC Executive Committee and the five active subcommittees? Finally, does Mr. Pruitt's decision to non-renew the appointments of members whose terms are up in August reflect his continued desire to increase diversity on the board, potentially including more representation from industry? My deadline is 11:45 this morning.

Dear BOSC members:

Thank you for your patience as we accommodate changes to the BOSC schedule and membership. As you are aware, BOSC members whose terms expired in late April were not renewed. This included many subcommittee chairs.

Because of the need to reconstitute the BOSC, we are cancelling all subcommittee meetings initially planned for late summer and fall. We are hopeful that an updated BOSC Executive Committee and the five subcommittees can resume their work in 2018 and continue providing ORD with thoughtful recommendations and comments.

ORD has now received confirmation that those members who expire in August will not be renewed. If your term expires in August 2017 or in March 2018, we encourage you to reapply for membership via this linkhttps://www.federalregister.gov/documents/2017/05/25/2017-10672/request-for-nominations-of-experts-to-the-epa-office-of-research-and-developments-board-of. We regret the inconvenience associated with applying again. Please note that the application deadline is June 30. As I mentioned in my May 30th email, we will be sending an invite out shortly for a brief teleconference with all current BOSC members to go over this information and answer any questions you may have.

Thank you again for your contributions to strengthening EPA's research programs. We appreciate your commitment and efforts to ensure that EPA continues to conduct outstanding, decision-oriented science.

On background or otherwise, can you give us any indication whether we should expect any action/commentary on two related issues: the reid vapor pressure waiver sought for E15 and the point of obligation change sought by Valero and other companies (which was proposed to be denied by EPA last year)? I'm of course happy to talk by phone.

E.P.A. Official Pressured Scientist on Congressional Testimony, Emails Show

By Coral Davenport 6/26/17

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency's chief of staff pressured the top scientist on the agency's scientific review board to alter her congressional testimony and play down the dismissal of expert advisers, his emails show.

Deborah Swackhamer, an environmental chemist who leads the E.P.A.'s Board of Scientific Counselors, was to testify on May 23 before the House Science Committee on the role of states in environmental policy when Ryan Jackson, the E.P.A.'s chief of staff, asked her to stick to the agency's "talking points" on the dismissals of several members of the scientific board.

"I was stunned that he was pushing me to 'correct' something in my testimony," said Dr. Swackhamer, a retired University of Minnesota professor. "I was factual, and he was not. I felt bullied."

Dr. Swackhamer's testimony came two weeks after the dismissals, which were met with fierce pushback from a scientific community that saw it as evidence that the Trump administration is seeking to weaken the role of academic science in environmental policy.

That criticism has sharpened in recent weeks, after the E.P.A. administrator, Scott Pruitt, and the energy secretary, Rick Perry, openly questioned the established science of human-caused climate change, and as the E.P.A. has taken down websites about climate change. Scientists have also expressed concern that Mr. Pruitt has staffed his senior offices with several former senior staff members of Senator James Inhofe of Oklahoma, a prominent denier of human-caused climate change. Mr. Jackson also came from Mr. Inhofe's staff.

Among other requests in his May 22 emails, Mr. Jackson asked Dr. Swackhamer to note that “a decision had not yet been made” about whether to dismiss her colleagues on the agency’s scientific review board. However, at that time, several scientists on the board had already received notices that their terms would not be renewed. Since that testimony, the E.P.A. has sent out dozens more notices to academic scientists that their terms on the board will not be renewed.

“The Board of Scientific Counselors had 68 members two months ago. It will have 11 come Sept. 1,” Dr. Swackhamer said. “They’ve essentially suspended scientific activities by ending these terms. We have no meetings scheduled, no bodies to do the work.”

James Thurber, the founder and former director of the Center for Congressional Studies at American University, said he had never heard of an administration pressuring a witness, particularly a scientist, to alter testimony already submitted for the official record.

“It’s shocking and insulting to be told before you go in to alter your testimony to what the administration wants,” he said. “This just shows a certain amount of amateurishness about how these hearings work. They’re supposed to be places where you get objective views. You don’t go around telling people what to say.”

Mr. Jackson and the E.P.A. communications office did not respond to emailed questions about Mr. Jackson’s communications with Dr. Swackhamer.

Representative Lamar Smith of Texas, the chairman of the committee, dismissed the accusations.

“It’s disappointing that the minority is politicizing what seems to be nothing more than a federal agency making sure that information provided to Congress is accurate,” he said in a statement. “Dr. Swackhamer and the Minority have repeatedly stated that she was testifying in her personal capacity and not in connection with her role as chair of the E.P.A. Board of Scientific Counselors. However, it is clear that the Minority invited her in an attempt to hijack the stated purpose of the Committee’s hearing on states’ role in E.P.A. rulemaking and shift the focus to recent E.P.A. actions involving the” Board of Scientific Counselors.

“Any attempt by E.P.A. to ensure that what Congress heard in testimony about official E.P.A. matters included the full breadth of information seems entirely appropriate,” Mr. Smith continued.

“Unfortunately, the Minority has made the choice to waste taxpayer dollars as part of a politically motivated agenda.”

Dr. Swackhamer said she had already submitted her testimony to the congressional committee by the time she received Mr. Jackson’s email. She had also told the Science Committee and the E.P.A. that she planned to speak in her role as an independent scientist rather than an E.P.A. employee, and that she would make this plain at the outset of her testimony.

Dr. Swackhamer made her emails with Mr. Jackson available to the committee’s Democrats. On Monday, the panel’s Democrats, led by the ranking member, Eddie Bernice Johnson of Texas, sent a letter to Mr. Pruitt expressing concern that Mr. Jackson’s attempt to shape Dr. Swackhamer’s testimony may have been improper or even illegal. The Democrats requested that the agency’s inspector general investigate the matter.

“We contend that Mr. Jackson, and perhaps other senior E.P.A. employees, attempted to interfere with the testimony of an independent scientist to the Science Committee and may have sought to mislead Congress,” they wrote.

Sorry folks, I've been on an assignment that pulls me away from these kinds of inquiries (and annoyingly, gets me distracted enough from email I just miss some stuff). You should reach out to graham.amy@epa.gov for these inquiries, as well as the press@epa.gov box.

Hi JP,

Emailing with questions about the question Pruitt got this week about IARC, that shady science place that sat on the study that said glyphosate was not cancerous.

Pruitt said he would look into this.

Can you help us with any info you have on what exactly he'll do?

On this email is Todd, our investigative guy. Any info you have can go to him...

Thanks if you can help, hope you're good.

Pete
